Hospital/Health Care Oriented Disaster Response By Doc Trauma This book is written under the auspices of the American Medical Association, and represents the first of their three levels of text, in the 3rd edition, for developing disaster resilience among health care workers. As such it does an admirable job of introducing the foundational concepts, and encouraging personal responsibility for preparations to maintain family and the ability to serve the community in such an event. The book complements the online version of the program, and provides a durable reference for the material presented in that course (National Disaster Life Support).

From Preface - Book assists responders and health providers to render the best care possible amidst the chaos that is the disaster. This course manual is intended as a reference and resource. It teaches the all-hazards approach to personal, institutional and community disaster management and lays the foundation for individuals from diverse professions, disciplines and backgrounds to come together as a team.
